Corunna welcomes home Dr. Jason Hall

By Bonnie Stevenson

The shortage of family physicians in Lambton County has been a matter of concern to healthcare practitioners and patients alike for several years now.

In recent years, a concerted effort has been made to recruit new physicians to the Sarnia-Lambton area, yet it is estimated that we are still underserved by about 18 doctors.

In Corunna, there is a bright spot in the midst of this dire outlook. Dr. Jason Hall will be starting a full-time practice at the beginning of April and will be taking on new patients. Dr. Hall has been working on a part-time basis at the office of Dr. William O'Mahony for the past few months, dividing his time between Corunna and a well-established practice in Michigan.

The move is a big step for Dr. Hall, who says it was his decision to move back to Canada. "I've got roots here. I grew up in Sarnia," he said, adding that his parents were co-owners of Scotty's chip truck, which has been a local landmark under the Bluewater Bridges for several decades. The eldest of nine children, he says he has many fond memories of summers spent working in the family business, turning out endless batches of the fabulous fries. "It taught me how to work," he said, joking that it took a dedicated work ethic to satisfy the customers' demand for fries.

This work ethic allowed Dr. Hall to graduate his medical studies with top honours and to forge a successful practice that has spanned 10 years in Greenville, Michigan.

Although moving back to Canada will be a costly one for Dr. Hall, he says country living and practicing away from busy urban centers holds great appeal for him. He also likes the diversity of a family practice.

Dr. Jason Hall

"I've always wanted to be a rural doctor. That's what I trained for," he said. "Family practice is what I've always wanted."

Dr. Hall admits it will take a bit of time for his family to get used to living in Canada. He and his wife have five daughters who, he expects, will have to endure a period of adjustment. But he is confident that they will soon embrace life in their new home.

Having spent time with some Corunna-area patients already, Dr. Hall says he has been impressed with his patient/doctor experiences. "Every patient I've met, I've liked," he said. "They're courteous and very friendly, and they're involved in their health care."

Dr. Hall says he is looking forward to seeing new patients and getting to know his new community.

Proposed solar energy project discussed

The First Solar Development project, proposed for an area south of Bentpath Line, east of Baseline Road, was discussed during a delegation to council's Feb. 1 meeting. A resident of Smith Line expressed several concerns and questions based on information he received during a recent project open house.

Among the resident's concerns were subjects such as how the project would affect drainage in the area and what the adverse impact of traffic to and from the site might be. He also noted that one of the chemicals used in the manufacturing of the type of solar panels proposed for the project contains a known carcinogenic. Further, he suggested that an ad hoc committee could be formed to review the First Solar proposal. At the conclusion of the discussion, Mayor Arnold presented the resident with a binder of information received by the township regarding the project and asked if he would be interested in reviewing the material. From this, he could produce an executive summary to be filed with the township in early March. The mayor's request was accepted.

The proposed First Solar Development project is a 350 acre, 20 megawatt facility.

South St. Clair Township keeps watchful eye on Wallaceburg hospital ER

By Bonnie Stevenson

Concern over the future of Sydenham District Hospital (SDH) in Wallaceburg is prompting fierce advocacy by many local residents, including many from south St. Clair Township. The fear is that the Wallaceburg facility will lose its emergency department and be declared an urgent care centre instead.

Recently, Port Lambton resident and retired registered nurse Shirley Roebuck, citing an article from the Chatham Daily News, expressed grave concern after the Chatham hospital's emergency room declared a "time consideration" for the third time in a one-month period. This situation occurs when the ER is full, requiring the redirection of stable, non-life threatening patients to other emergency rooms, in this case, Wallaceburg's Sydenham District Hospital. She pointed out that the Chatham Kent Health Alliance (CKHA) experiences an average of three time considerations per month and that it is fortunate the Wallaceburg ER was still in operation to receive patients who are redirected.

To these concerns, Gary Switzer, CEO of the Erie St. Clair LHIN (Local Health Integration Network), responded, "We made a commitment to keep emergency departments open and that commitment stands."

Local healthcare advocates remain wary and have vowed to keep a watchful eye on their hospital. They are monitoring the progress of the Rural and Northern Health Care Panel, a fact-finding effort by the Ontario Ministry of Health and Long-Term Care. They will also be present when the Ontario Health Coalition visits the Oaks Inn in Wallaceburg on March 4.

Spokesperson Jeff Wesley said, "While this (the retention of the SDH ER) is good news, I cannot stress strong enough that we remain on full alert. At every phase of the Rural and Northern Health Care Panel, we will review the decisions and take steps to protect SDH if need be. (We) remain strong, well-funded and ready to mobilize on a moment's notice." He added, "We will be very vigilant, attending all LHIN meetings and being very engaged with the panel."
