

Impact of mild Winter on crop production viewed with cautious optimism

By Bonnie Stevenson

The unusually mild Winter has many people wondering what effect it will have on this year's agricultural production.

St. Clair Township has hundreds of acres of farmland within its borders and the weather plays a crucial role in the success or failure of a growing season. To get an early perspective on this important matter, I contacted Ronald MacDougall, president of the Lambton Federation of Agriculture.

Mr. MacDougall says the winter crops were a concern. "There was concern over the impact on winter wheat," he said, "but now it looks like they (winter crops) have come through okay." He added winter crop yield may still be affected to a degree because excess rainfall last autumn prevented farmers from planting some of their fields. "They planted late last year...only 60 to 70 per cent (of the fields) were planted," he said.

Some farmers are cautiously optimistic that this season's overall production won't be affected too much. Mr. MacDougall says they speak from many years of experience about the effects of unusual weather. "I've been told by some of our senior farmers that there have been winters with not a great deal of snowfall," he said. As a producer of corn, soy beans and wheat, Mr. MacDougall says it's much too early to worry about how the coming growing season will play out.

Just out of curiosity, I consulted the Canadian Edition of The Old Farmer's Almanac for 2012, which had this to say about the weather in southern Ontario. Concerning temperatures: "Winter temperatures will be about a degree C below normal, on average...Precipitation and snowfall > will be above normal in the east and slightly below normal in the west." The almanac went on to predict snow and cool weather well into March. Well, nobody's perfect.

> For now, farmers will be observing a wait-andsee attitude, just like they do every other year.

In the meantime, we need to be ever mindful that, with the effects of global warming playing havoc with our weather patterns, our agricultural producers are our front line champions in the quest to provide food for all of us.

As the bumper sticker says, "If you ate today, thank a farmer!"

HERITAGE CORNER

Doors Open tour will feature many St. Clair Township sites

Heritage preservation is a passion and a source of pride for many St. Clair Township residents, property and business owners.

This year, for two days in September, some of them are going to have the opportunity to show off the objects of their pride during the Lambton Doors Open event. This is the second year the county-wide event has been held and owners of 16 St. Clair Township landmarks and properties have confirmed participation so far. These properties include the Smith Farm Estate and Enterprises in the Courtright area, the Eric Smith bridge near Sombra, and Baby's Point in Port Lambton. Several more site owners are expected to confirm participation before the event happens.

The first Doors Open Day was held in France in 1984. The concept spread through Europe until, in 2003, all 48 signatory states of the European Cultural Convention participated in European Heritage Days. In North America, the City of Toronto was the first to hold a Doors Open event in 2000. In 2002, the Ontario Heritage Trust launched Doors Open Ontario, the first province-wide event of its kind in the Canada. Since then, it has spread across Canada and into the United States.

Since 2002, Doors Open Ontario has allowed an estimated four million people the chance to discover Ontario's heritage treasures, including some that the public has never before had access to. In 2012, St. Clair Township will be among the hundreds of communities that will participate in what has been described as a "cultural phenomenon."

As more information becomes available, The Beacon will keep you up to date. For now, why not plan to explore the many fascinating destinations that will have their Doors Open on the weekend of Sept. 29-30. It may be the best "staycation" you've ever had.

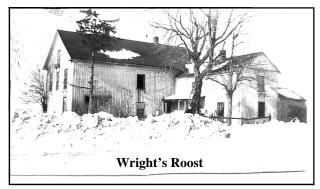

Prohibition Era kept life interesting at Wright's Roost

A favourite Sombra watering hole during the Prohibition Era was Wright's Roost, which was located in what is now Sombra Park. During that infamous period in the area's history, rum runners used the St. Clair River as a quick way to keep thirsty Americans supplied with contraband booze and Wright's Roost played host to many of them. At that time, the hotel was owned by Mrs. Owen Wright, an American business woman.

Some of Mrs. Wright's clientele were independent entrepreneurs while others worked for organized crime gangs like Detroit's Purple Gang. One of the independent entrepreneurs, Vet Brown, shot and killed Border Patrol Agent Earl Roberts in March, 1929 while unloading cases of whiskey on a dock near Algonac, Michigan. Brown was captured in Sombra, tried in Port Huron, and served a 20 year prison sentence for second degree murder.

Mrs. Wright eventually used the money she made from her hotel to turn it into a first class road house. She sold it at the right time to a group of investors from Marine City, Michigan, a wise move since the end of the Prohibition Era in 1933 also ended the profitability of Wright's Roost.

The structure was built in 1836 by James Dawson. Most of the building was known as the Dawson Hotel, with Dawson and his family residing in one section of it. The hotel played host to local lumber men who brought the hardwood lumber they'd cut to Sombra, where it could be shipped out on the St. Clair River.

During its lifetime, the building changed hands several times and eventually fell into disrepair. In 1943, James Hagen of Wallaceburg moved part of it to Wallaceburg to set up as a home, then demolished what remained.

All that remains on the property now is a prim white gazebo in a quiet park and some provocative memories of days gone by.

Mooretown Storm Atom AE team reaches finals at Aylmer Tournament

Mooretown Storm Atom AE team players and coaches sit for a formal portrait at the Aylmer Tournament.

The Mooretown Storm Atom AE team turned in a terrific effort at the Aylmer Tournament the weekend of March 16 to 19. Team reporter Mike Coene says the tournament began Friday night by beating Huntsville 3-1. The team lost to Norwich the next morning by a score of 3-2 and again to Simcoe, 2-1. But the Storm had earned enough period and game points to be seeded fourth, which got them a rematch against top seeded Norwich in the semi-final.

Mr. Coene says the rematch was packed with excitement as it turned into a double overtime thriller that saw the Storm triumph. They won the right to face off against Huntsville in the finals. And although the Mooretown team gave their best effort, the final resulted in a close 4-3 loss. "Regardless, they were still finalists and should be proud of their achievement," said Mr. Coene.
